his political repression had jeopardized American military aid to this country.

But a spokesman for Mr. Ford declined to disclose whether the U.S. President had approved or political measures.

The assistant secretary state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, Philip Hahih, told newsmen after a two-hour meeting of to President Chung Hee Park that condemned Mr. Park's domestic South Korea's politics had come up, "hut I don't think it is appropriate for me to discuss in detail anything that was said."

Mr. Habib was formerly the American ambassador here.

On other matters, Mr. Habib and a joint communique said that:

· Mr. Ford had invited Park to the United States May Recognize North

. Mr. Ford told Mr. Park that he has "no intention to withdraw U.S. forces from the Korean reninsula." Congressional pressures for reducing the 38,000 troop contingent here appear to have been growing.

. The United States will assist South Korea in the modernization of its military forces, which will cost Washington $400 million to $500 million.

 American investment in Korea should be encouraged, even though some American business men are dissatisfied with bustness conditions here and Mr. Park's government is emphasizing the threat from North Korea. Mr. Habih declined to say directly whether Mr. Ford had discussed South Korean political repression in the context of congressional approval of military aid to Seoul

But he did note that Mr. Ford "affirmed that we would seek to fulfill the military modernization program while pointing out that that, of course, required the support and assistance of funds from the Congress." Much of the American criticism of Mr. Park's rule has come from the Congress.

It appeared that Mr. Ford brought up the subject, although Mr. Habib would not say so, because South Korean officials earlier said that Mr. Park peither expected the subject to come up nor did he intend to bring it up himself.

He told Labor party supporters: "At a time when feelings are justifiably running very high, we must remember that the overwhelming majority of Irish people in Britain condemn and detest these wicked attacks as much as anyone else."

Members of Parliament demanded a return of the death penalty, and anti-Irish demonstrations broke out at factories in the Midlands.

This is the more surprisingand reassuring to the Israeli authorities—in view of the fact that in the years immediately following the 1967 war, when Israeli forces occupied both areas, the Gaza Strip was the most rebel-lious. More than 1,000 Arebs were killed by guerrillas in a struggle to prevent cooperation with the occupation regime.

The guerrilla groups were neutralized before last year's out-break of war, and Gaza, like the West Bank, remained quiet during the fighting.

Egypt had occupied the coastal strip in south Palestine in accordance with the armistice with Israel from 1949 until 1967.

Political Inertia

But while the population of the West Bank has increasingly committed itself to the Palestine Liberation Organization and has openly demonstrated this sentiment in recent weeks, Gaza's population of about 365,000 crowded into a strip along the Mediterranean 25 miles long and three to six miles wide, appears politically inert.

The reasons for the apparent pacification of Gaze under Israeli occupation are twofold, according to Arab, Israeli and neutral observers in the strip.

The first reason clied is an absence of leadership. This is due to drastic Israeli repression of all opposition since the occupation, according to the observers. Some contended also that under Egyptian military government no encouragement was given to political activity.

Israel contends that its rule is far easier than the Egyptian military government. Israelis point to the ease with which people from Gaza circulate and work within Israel, while under Egypt special travel permits, rarely issued, were required.

Bombings Make Birmingham Battlefield of a Distant War

BIRMINGHAM, England, Nov. the backlash has begun and is 22 (NYT).-Maurice Buck, deputy chief constable of the West Midlands, groped for a way to make clear the transformation of this ugiy but vigorous industrial capital in one frightful moment

"It" is 19 dead and mostly dismembered bodies, and 184 people lying injured after bombs destroyed two puls in downtown Birmingham. One way or an-other, people in this city, Britain's second-biggest, are trying to cope with the realization that the disant war in Northern Ireland is among them. Mr. Buck had been np most of the night. His voice held the strained tone, controlled just this side of breaking, that is the most characteristic sound in the city

It was in the voice of a doctor at the Accident Hospital. He told, sighing audibly between phrases, of what had been brought in to him during the night. "We got a young girl who'll most certainly he blind in both eyes," he was saying, "and a man came in, 30 years old, legs blown off, an arm blown off. "It'll be a long job to put these people together again."

It was in the voice of a politician, Clive Wilkinson, leader of Birmingham's City Council. "I want to see the people reacting calmly," he said in an address. "We must show these people who have committed this outrage that we are not going to be bombed or terrorized into submission.

"We mean to carry on civilized government in Birmingham. We will not be bombed away from it." Another Fear Besides fear of the IRA, there is a second fear in Birmingham today, About 110,000 Irish - born live here-10 per cent of the popniation. The worry that yesterday's bombs, and any that may follow, will set the English majority against them is clearly at the front of the minds of all of Rirmingham's civic leaders. By all evidence, the overwhelming majority of the Irish community is at least as horrified about the IRA as Birmingham's English, Statements of condemna. tion were coming in from Irish groups all over the city.

But a gasoline bomb was thrown into the Irish Community Center last night, slightly scorching the ceiling. Another was thrown at a Catholic church. Some people in Birmingham today are in the mood of Albert Edwards, a middle-aged office worker, who said stiffly, "My views are quite ex-treme, I realise that. But I'd throw the Irish out."

When councilor Wilkinson spoke of not allowing the city to was thinking of the danger of an anti-Catholic backlash. So were the Catholic and Anglican bishops. of Birmingham when they came out to the city center this morning to conduct joint prayers for the victims of the bombs.

"I can't tell you how many Irish were in the march but I can tell you that every single Irishman working in West Plant marched with us."

(Continued from Page 1) view of well-informed Americans here and knowledgeable Soviet sources, the scheduled 10 hours or so of working sessions involving Mr. Ford and Mr. Brezhnev is too short to produce any substantive breakthrough on the arms questions.

The best that can be hoped for, Americans say, is a state-ment of agreed principles for further SALT bargaining that would be put forth as a separate document from the standard endof-summit communique.

On the Middle East, it is expected that existing differences will be aired, but without any prospect for resolving them despite the mounting tension in the area. A Soviet source speculated that discussions would cen-ter on the expiration on Nov. 30 of the Israeli-Syrian disengagement agreement negotiated by Mr. Kissinger lest spring.

At every opportunity, the Russians renew their call for an immediate resumption of the Geneva Mideast conference and that will certainly be repeated in private. But most importantly, according to the Russians, should. war break out in the area, Mr. Brezhnev and Mr. Ford will oow at least have the benefit of knowing each other's thinking first hand in deciding how to proceed. Another subject known to interest the Russians is Mr. Ford's relationship with the newly elected Congress. WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (WP). The Senate Rules Committee voted, 9 to 0, today to approve the nomination of Nelson Rockefeller as vice-president of the United States.

The committee chairman, Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., said the formal report on Mr. Rockefeller will be filed by midnight Dec. 3, and the nomination will be called up for debate shortly after.

Senate observers believe that, despite a flap over Mr. Rockefeller's gifts to public officials of New York and his role in the financing of a 1970 campaign book critical of a political opconent, Mr. Rockefeller will win approval from the full Senate, unless new and damaging facts about him come to light in House Judiciary Committee hearings.

Sen, Cannon said the Rules Committee, before voting to report the nomination favorably, had declined by unanimous vote to impose on Mr. Rockefeller any formal requirement to put his vast financial holdings in a blind trust or to refrain from making further personal gifts to public

The Rules Committee noted that Mr. Rockefeller, in a statement to the House Judiclary Committee, had promised to create a blind trust, and that the nom-

House Clears Bill to Assist Mass Transit

Subway Systems To Get Subsidies

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22 (AP). -Congress completed action yesterday on a comprehensive mass transit bill which for the first time would authorize federal subsidies for hard-pressed subway

The House passed the compromise six-year, $11.8-billion masstransit package by a 268-109 vote. ending two years of work on the legislation. The Senate approved the bill Tuesday.

Members earlier had accepted the bill for debate by a 241-154 vote, with most members on the Publics Works Committee oppos-ing it. They were protesting what they called the dictatorial be-havior of the Senate in refusing to consider their bill, which had been passed by the House last Yesterday's debate included the reading of a telegram from President Ford urging passage of the bill. "It represents a responsible step in our efforts to reduce energy consumption and control inflation," Mr. Ford said.

The majority leader, Rep. Thomas O'Neill of Massachusetts said the compromise represented the only hope for passage this year of mass-transit assistance. which he said was "desperately needed in major urban areas."

35-Cent Fare Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., said the bill would help New York City preserve its 35-cent bus and subway fare "which is already a burden on the working people. The bill provides $3.9 billion in operating subsidies, bot eligible for new equipment if they wished. The remaining $7.9 billion would extend the current programs for mass transit capital grants to buy buses, subway cars, tracks and other items to improve mass transportation systems.

cities could use their share instead

Local funds would have to match federal funds on a 50-50 basis for the operating subsidies. For the capital grants, the federal government would pay 80 per cent and the local governments 20 per cent.

'Concluding' My Lai

the Pentagon report on the My Lai cover-up, Army Secretary Howard Callaway announced that " a dark chapter in the Army's history" had been concluded. There is little question that the whole episode, from the inception of the operation to the extremely belated release of the report, was an abysmal performance.

The question remains, however, whether a series of events so degrading to the nation and so disgraceful to the service can ever be considered fully concluded. The one nonorable aspect of the affair is the report itself-and even here the Army acted shamefully by shunting aside the distinguished general who conducted the inquiry.

The report convincingly documents its charges that "at every command level within the Americal Division actions were taken, both wittingly and unwittingly, which effectively suppressed information concerning the war crimes committed at My Lai, where at least 175 and possibly more than 400 Vietnamese civilians were massacred." Although little can match the story of the murders and atrocities for sheer horror, the cover-up story is almost as chilling in its way, for what it tells about a military institution in trouble and under stress.

In brief summary, the report charges that the battlefield commanders had substantial knowledge of the extent of the crimes, but that only a portion of the information was transmitted to higher authorities; that although a specific war crimes charge was made, it was transmitted slowly and was

With the release last week of portions of diluted by the time it reached division headquarters; that although sufficient information did reach division headquarters to warrant an investigation, no real investigation was ever made and no report was transmitted to higher authority.

The result was that 14 officers were accused of covering up the murders. These were disposed of by one trial which resulted in an acquittal and 13 administrative dismissals. The commanding general of the division was demoted and stripped of a medal and his chief deputy was stripped of a medal and censured.

Lt. Gen. William Peers, who conducted the cover-up investigation vigorously and with high integrity, was eased into an early retirement at the age of 58. His report, dated March 14, 1970, was not released by the army until Nov. 13, 1974, just six days before Lt. William Calley, the only man convicted of any of the crimes, was to be set free on

Secretary Callaway said, "It is an incident from which the Army has learned a great deal." Unfortunately, during the time of Watergate, the nation has also learned a great deal from My Lai and other current history. While the Army can change its training programs, Americans are left to wonder both about the integrity of their institutions and about a "system" in which so few are punished for such profoundly heinous and massively degrading crimes. It seems to us that such a chapter can never be concluded so long as there is conscience and memory.

A Deal in Southern Africa?

Are South Africa and its black African neighbors looking for a way to avoid a racial conflagration? That the question can be asked at all is evidence of a change of pace unforeseen and perhaps even unforeseeable just a few months ago. In the interim, two things have happened. First, Pretoria's geopolitical buffer against black nationalism has crumbled significantly: Angola and Mozambique have been freed from Portuguese colonial control; white-ruled Rhodesia has come under fresh pressure across its own border with Mozambique; the black client state of Botswana is showing signs of moving out on its own, and the Pretoria-run territory of South-West Africa (Namibia) has moved closer to self-rule. Second, the American-British-French triple veto which saved South Africa from expulsion from the UN earlier this month has given the United States in particular new leverage in its attempts to urge flexibility. Inside South Africa, these developments appear to have been put to use by advocates of moderation.

No doubt there are other factors at work. The important point is that in recent days the government of Prime Minister John Vorster has made a series of statements so unprecedentedly responsible that no less an African nationalist than Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda has hailed him as the "voice of reason for which Africa and the rest of the world have been waiting." Mr. Vorster responded by requesting a brief grace period. "If South Africa is given that chance," he said, "[the black African states] will be surprised at where the country will stand in six to 12 months." Various quiet talks are apparently under way. The basic deal under consideration, according to Washington Post correspondent David Ottaway, is this: South Africa would abandon its military support of Rhodesia, give Namibia prompt independence, and alter substantially its domestic policy of apartheid. In return. the African states would undertake to accept South Africa and to end their support for guerrillas trying to destroy it.

Whether the pieces of this puzzle can be put together is, of course, problematical. The temptation will be considerable for South Africa to combine the easier foreign-policy concessions with changes of only cosmetic value in its racial ways at home. Africans less responsible than Mr. Kaunda and Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, who is also said to be using his influence for accommodation, will be under their own kind of pressure to resist compromise. There is an obvious sense in which extremists of both sides fuel each other. The benefits of accommodation, in terms of averting war, encouraging economic development and enhancing human dignity, are self-evident and tremendous but not easily gained.

Meanwhile. South Africa must be kept under heavy political and moral pressure to make good its promise of change. Why, for instance, are some 30 members of the Black Consciousness Movement still being detained -some incommunicado and, reportedly, under torture-for their part in a planned but banned pro-Frelimo rally six weeks, ago? This would be exactly the wrong time, moreover, for the United States to offer Pretoria the military cooperation which the South Africans avidly seek. At the same time, the American policy of "communication" with South Africa should be continued. It can be argued that any contacts with Pretoria legitimize it and apartheld but, we believe, communication gives Washington a channel for constructive views which Pretoria might otherwise spurn.

Savagery in Birmingham

Dozens of people who have no connection with the politics of Ireland were indiscriminately killed or maimed by the series of explosions in Birmingham on Thursday night. It was an outrage beyond endurance. Taken with other hombings in Birmingham and Coventry, and earlier in Guildford, it may be a watershed of our civil liberties.

A liberal society cannot let its freedom, and its concern for the rights of the individual be abused in order that it shall be torn to pleces. From now on anyhody who complains that he is being harassed by a police bomb squad will find a less sympathetic audience. Our society is suffering murder and mutilation and it must protect itself. If this means closer surveillance of people suspected of sustaining the Provisional IRA in Britain then they must either act to free themselves of the suspicion or accept that infringement of their privacy is a small price to pay to prevent further terrorist outrages.

The infamous James McDaid received his deserts when he killed himself last week in Coventry in trying to kill others. Yet in some eyes he is a hero, and for every McDaid who dies before he can get away there are others who will plant a bomb-one of them Thursday night in a bar said to contain up to 300 people—and laugh at the results on television. Our laws and our police procedures were not designed to handle men like this. It must be questionable whether these men-and women-have any purpose other than to bomb for bombing's sake. For in what way can Ireland ever be a happier place because of the slaughter of uninvolved people in the pubs of Birmingham?

Bleak Outlook for Ford's Premature Summit

By James Reston

WASHINGTON. - The Ford-Breshney meeting at Vladi-vostok was arranged primarily at the urging of Moscowat a particularly awkward time for the United States. It may be useful in introducing Ford to the mysteries of Soviet diplomacy, but there are at least three reasons why it is not likely to make much progress.

First, the United States, Europe and Japan have not agreed on a common policy toward the oil states of the Middle East or Soviet policy in that region. Second, the United States and the Soviet Union are deeply divided on the meaning of the UN Security Council Resolution 242, which was designed to establish peace in the Middle East.

Third, the U.S. government itself is divided on what it intends to do and what it expects the Soviet Union to do under the socalled policy of "detente."

Need for Unity

There is very little chance that the Soviet Union will implement the noble principles of the last summit meeting between Nixon and Brezhnev unless the major non-Communist nations stand together in the present economic and political crisis of the Middle East. Secretary of State Kissinger said as much in his brutally frank . and brilliant speech at the University of Chicago before he left for the Far Bast.

Lacking a common policy by the major oil consumers in North America, Europe, and Japan, he said, "Even the bopeful process of easing tensions with our adversaries could suffer, because it ical unity of the Atlantic nations and Japan,"

"If current economic trends continue." Kissinger observed. "we face further and mounting worldwide shortages, unemployment, poverty, and hunger ... an economic crisis of such magnitude would inevitably produce dangerous political consequences.

"Mounting inflation and recession ... will fuel the frustration of all whose hopes for economic progress are suddenly and cruelly rebuffed. This is fertile ground for social conflict and political

But the European nations and Japan, while agreeing on the principle of unity, have been doing very little about it, and the Soviet Unon, despite its verbal support of détente and peaceful coexistence, still seems to feel that mounting inflation and recession, shortages, unemployment, poverty, and hunger weaken and divide the non-Communist ustions to the strategic and political advantage of the Soviet Union.

clear intent of that resolution (242) was that the peace agreement and the withdrawal of Israel from occupied Arab territory should go hand-in-hand. Once agreement has been reached on the problems of security, free passage through international waters, a just settlement of the refugee problem, and the estab-lishment of secure and recognized frontiers, Israel would then be obliged to withdraw roughly to the borders in existence before the six-day war of 1967; But the Arabs, with Soviet backing, are insisting that Israel must withdraw first and try to negotiate later, and they are now supporting the Palestine Liberation Organization in its demands for the creation of a secular Palestinian state, which would mean the end of Israel as an independent Jewish nation.

In the face of these Soviet policies it is scarcely surprising that some influential members of President Ford's own cabinet are wondering whether Moscow's terms for déteute are really leading to a new and better world disorder throughout the major non-Communist countries. There has been a tendency in Washington to assume that any agreement with the Soviet Union is better than no agreement at all. In support of this, it is noted that by holding up trade agreements and technology arrangements with the Soviet Union. Washington was able to persuade the Soviet government to release tens of thousands of Soviet Jews who wanted to emigrate to Israel.

A Gain

On humanitarian grounds this was obviously a gain, but the question is whether the United States should not have been insisting on a genuine and secure peace in the Middle East as a condition of its trade and technology, Which Moscow obviously

They do not mind détente with the United States so long as they are free to operate at will in the Middle East, patrol the Mediterranean, and threaten the flow of oil to Europe, Japan and North America. Their eagnerness to see the new American President was undoubtedly to assure themselves that their concept of détente would be carried on by the new administration. .

Even if Ford wanted to change it, however, it is unlikely that he could do so without the cooperation of Europe and Japan. This is the essential condition of a just policy of peaceful coexistence, but Kissinger has been trying to arrange it since April of 1973, with-

DARIS In Europe, the Fourth Estate—on which Western concepts of democracy are firmly rooted—is sick. Such, at least, is the conclusion of an extensive series of articles published by Le Monde, the most influential French daily. And the illness analyzed by its correspondents is obviously prevalent elsewhere.

The Paris newspaper examined press conditions in France, Britain, Italy, West Germany, Switzerland and Belgium, industrial countries with high literacy rates. It omitted—presumably as useless —analysis of newspapers in lands where censorship prevails.

While its scope did not include the Western Hemisphere, a similar malaise clearly exists in the United States. One has only to compare the number of American dailies prior to World War II maintaining staffs of overseas reporters with the number today; and one seizes the point.

Seriously III

Le Monde's study indicates the daily press is seriously ill for dif-fering reasons. The leakage of advertising to television in United States has no effect in France. Likewise, competition by massively imported foreign journals in tiny Switzerland is a phenomenon of little importance

Apart from detecting economic sickness, the survey concludes there is a notable tendency toward concentration, depolitization and an intrusion of big capital into the control of the informstion business. Everywhere, Le risen because the country is virtually self-supporting in paper, 74 dailies have vanished in five years. Most of these were small. Belgian papers are likewise con-tinually folding.

The West German press is feeling the effects of inflation and economic crisis. But dailies are losing circula-tion (from 15 to 22 per cent) as their price rises. This, combined with increased newsprint and labor costs, squeezes their numbers steadily. Il Corriere della Sera of Milan, perhaps Italy's most famous journal, is expected to lose nine billion lire ($13.5 million) in 1974

What conclusions can be drawn? First, daily papers have not met the test of efficiency in a time of economic trouble. Third, as they discover to their own discontent, there are probably still too many of them in a world now accustomed to television, radio and widely circulated news magazines

It is thought that a successful resolution of the problem would enable Athens to reintegrate its military forces into NATO.

However, Mr. Caramanns nes repeatedly said that the Cyprus problem should be resolved by Greek Cyprilets and Turkish Cypriots and there is a clear impression here that he would like to dissociate himself from what has to be an unpopular final Western diplomats point out that among the Greeks there is no unified view about how to approach the issue. Acting Cyprus esident Glafkos Clerides a statements differ substantially from those of the ousted President Archbishop Makarlos. The position of Athens is not clear although well-informed diplomatic sources say that the Greeks would agree to a formula that would divide Cyprus into separate areas, some administered by Greek Cypriots and others by Turkish Cypriots.

Return of Refugees

But the Greeks are said to be sisting on the return of refugees to their homes and the establishment of a central government with clearly defined authority.

If Washington takes a diplomatic initiative and secures some tangible concessions from Ankara, it is thought that Athens would have to pressure Archbishop Makarlos—who is expected in Athens next month-urging him to modify his intransigent position.

U.S. diplomats here, who until recently argued vigorously that to Western security in the eastern Mediterranean, are now telling American journalists that these facilities are not important. This argument is viewed as a hargain-ing position in advance of the expected negotiations about U.S.

In addition, such an act might lave brought the Soviet Union into the picture they said, thus elevating the crisis into a poten-Lial superpower confrontation,

Mr. Tasca, who has since been removed as envoy to Greece, said in a telephone interview last night, "It would be inappropriate for me to comment" on last sum-iner's events. But, asked if his suggestion was turned down because Mr. Kisvasion, he said 'There is not any foundation to that."

Similar denials were made by U.S. officials, who also reacted strongly against reports that Mr. Kissinger had approved the coup that overthrew Archbishop Makarlos as President of Cyprus. "That is just flat-out wrong," an official said.

Archbishop Makarios was ousted by military elements under the direction of Greek Army officers whom he had tried to expel from the Cypriot National Guard. Mr. Tasca's option was similar to a tactic used in 1964 by thenpresident Lyndon Johnson to stop a Turkish invasion of Cyprus. Turkey already had launched its forces when Johnson sent a note threatening the use of the Sixth Fleet to stop the invasion. In an act that humiliated the Turks, Turkish leaders gave in and ordered their navy to return

A U.S. source suggested that-Mr. Kissinger did not fully trust recommendations by Mr. Tasca, who was felt to have been too closely aligned to the Greek military junta in power at that time. Late last spring, however, Mr. Tasca suddenly began sending cables to Washington urging reconsideration of the near-total American support of the dictato-

French Say Two Will Attend, Both Deny It

BRUSSELS, Nov. 22 (UPI).— France applied diplomatic pres-sure on Italy and Ireland today to force them to attend a European summit meeting in Paris next month.

The pressure took the form of an announcement by the French government spokesman that all nine European Common Market nations—including Italy and Ire-land—had agreed to attend the French-sponsored meeting of prime ministers Dec. 9-10, Italian and Irish officials denied they would attend unless the seven others agree in advance to a detailed plan to aid their poorest regions.

Turcato is a poetic wanderer in strange countries, penetrating new continents of paint, texture or shape, overturning old values. His ease and mastery did come about without a struggle: This is evident in this restropective of more than 300 works, sponsored by the Municipal Council of Antiquity, Fine Arts and Culture of Rome, The works span the period from 1940 to the present.

Originally from Venice, Turcato matured in Rome during the war years. His early abstractions of coal mines, of the ruins of the Warsaw ghetto and on other social issues, in contrasts

Then in the late 1940s, a search evolves: a whole group of canvases patterned with red triangles, dashes and stars are aflutter with movement, with dynamics quite close to recent futurism. The paintings become ever more serious, as well as fanciful. From then on they are grouped around a particular enquiry. While becoming progressively richer in content and deeper in color, the paintings consist of fewer and simpler elements. Finally the shapes and symbols leave the canvas. In the "Chained Liberty" group and the "Oceanica" series of 1973 and 1974, flat forms — perforated, swallowtailed, sinuously curved, painted in prism colors-are culpture which is outrageously unsculptural. The slender cutout slivers and boards lean, tilt, swarm around the viewer as if they were parts of an underwater palace or forest.

Turcato's work is purposely free of the School-of-Paris nicedes. His lconoclasm and stance, if it is like anything, resembles that of the New York action painters who, though belonging to a slightly older generation, also shook free of the same constricting traditions, to use funkiness, gaucheness and unattractive colors for the sake of truth. Like them. Turcato is a master precisely because he stopped following the masters.

This neither denies that there is a deep current of wisdom of civilized understanding of reality behind his painting, nor does it tian background, apparent in his use of color.

At the height of his career, Turcato is neither dry nor repetitive. His ease grows ever more seductive. Wicked at times, humorous or devil-may-care, he is never cerebral but intuitive, moving from invention to inven-

LONDON THEATER

A Muddled, Pretentious 'Beast'

By John Walker

ONDON, Nov. 22 (THT) -Alas, another young British playwright bites the dust this week One by one the young braves of fringe theater are trying to write ambitious full-length works and botching the attempt. More and more, the talents thrown up by the new and restless theater groups are proving inadequate to the tasks they set themselves. latest disappointment is Spoo Wilson's muddled and pretentious "The Beast," presented by the Royal Shakespeare Company at The Place.

The play is loosely hased on the life of Aleister Crowley, the, magician and minor poet who re-veled in the title of "the wickedest man in the world." although he did little to justify such ac-claim. Crowley outlived his reputation, dying at the age of 72 in 1947. His fame has revived in the last 10 years, along with the growing interest in the occult and various forms of debased mysticism. Seven years ago, for instance, the Beatles put him next to Mae West in the group portrait that decorated the LP Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Heart's Club Band."

Mr. Wilson has chosen to present Crowley's life and obsessions. particularly with what he called "sex magic," in the vaudeville style so favored by so many young writers. The opening, indeed, recalled nothing so much as Low Moan Spectacular's recent bursque of Bulldog Drummond, with Richard Pasco, bounding on in a bald-wig and kilt as Crowley.

resembling Ron House's send-up of a Germanic villain who was "the second most dangerous man in Europe." The production relies upon a sniggering humor to make its points, treating Crowley's wretched childhood as a joke and extracting as much fun as possible from such true events as the young Crowley testing the truth of the saying that a cat has nine lives by killing a cat in nine ways.

Mr. Pasco, although looking

Entertainment In New York

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (IET).— This is how critics for The New York Times rate new films: "Lucky Lucians," directed hy Prancesco Rosi, focuses on the gangster Luciano after his deportation from the United States to his native Italy in 1946 through his death in 1962, but there are numerous flashbacks which A. H. Weller finds con-fusing. "Most of the cast contributes surface stints that fade quickly . . Despite the straining of all concerned for unvarnished realism, bo'i the bad and good guys in Tacky Luciano' are rarely better than commonplace figures in a commonplace gangster melodrama." Gian-Maria Volonte plays Luciano in a properly taut, controlled style. Rod Steiger, however, is disap-pointing as a hoodlum stool pigeon, as is Edmond O'Brien as rather too cleancut, gives an impressive performance after the shaky start, as does Rosemar McHale as his simpering scarle woman, companion of his sexus rituals. Both are seen by th author as pathetic figures, play ing with things they barely un derstand. It is difficult to un derstand why Mr. Wilson wante to write his play. At times seems as if Crowley is being use as a representative of certain contemporary trends, a sort of symbolic junk-filled hippie. Muc is made of his dictum "Do wha thou wilt shall be the whole of the law." His fascination with exploring experience through th use of sex and drugs and ever death has recognizable links wife some of today's feverish happer By deflating Crowley, shown him as a pathetic and feeb show, Mr. Wilson seems to bo that it will appear that be making some comment on today. But for all his liking erotica, his use of the "I Chin Crowley remains essentially Victorian figure, the obverse that era's apparent respectability but given to the same imperia istic drives and a burning decig for perition and power.

The play's construction, do in flashback with a succession short scenes, is shapeless ar adds to the central confusion. is sad to see such a good act as Tony Church dressed up as transvestite policeman for particular dramatic purpose, 22 indeed, so many talents used

"Liberty Leading the People," by Del acroix, included in the Paris exhibition.

Luke, was itself a well structured administration, and any artist who made his way into it had his future assured and a social status that was considered enviable. Ever since the Renaissance, artists hadbeen struggling for status-hence Leonardo'e famous and much misconstrued saying that art was "cosa mental," a matter of the mind. But access to the academy hinged upon the acceptance by the jury of a "masterplece." And erpiece had to satisfy not only technical and stylistic criteria-it had to convey some sort of moral lesson. What makes many of these artists so dreary is that they were rather second-Hardly ever, I suspect, does a politician get out of bed saying "I am going to make a momen-tous statement today what will it be?" He makes the statements. that his policy and circumstances require, and they may occasionalturn out to be momentous. The artist's problem, in the academic system, was that he was faced with trrelevant demands that he produce something meaningful, perhaps sublime, in any case edifying. And these demands he fully accepted. He wanted to produce "momentous" paintings that satisfied such criteria of elevation-filustrating noble conduct, deeds of beroism and the

David, the very model of a stoic, moralizing classicist, was against the academy, not because. he felt its criteria were wrong, were not being properly applied this candidacy for the Prix de Rome was three times rejected). His "Death of Socrates" is a typical work of that period and well illustrates the problem of virtue that so preoccupied that society. In a Christian society, the problem of virtue and sin, of good and evil was given a dynamic. dialectical formulation that did not eliminate the contradictions within the individual himself. In the more skeptical age of enlightenment Rousseau did eliminate the contradiction by declaring man basically good and society the corrupter. This belief generated a rather pervasive, sentimental bad faith (e.g. Dr. Goebbels loved dogs). To us, today, pure virtue is never credible. It must be fueled by a darker passion that intro-duces a contradictory element into the situation and gives it a broader and more human dimension. Socrates has been made into a pedantic bore even by Rossellini in his film-because one has forgotten the dangerous, ironic playfulness which, bidding the highest possible stakes, injected a terrible spice into the Socratic logic.

Delacroix, in hie aliegorical "Liberty Leading the People," avoids this pitfall because his subject is enthusiasm rather than Good vs. Evil. David himself does so in his "Marat Assassine". (unfortunately not shown here) because the artist's own convic-tion is so powerful that he sets aside all rhetorical devices to produce what is probably his best painting. It is a modern work-or at least we can construe it as such, because the dated philosophy of the period does not obtrude. Ingres, with his bizarre-talent the was once described as "a Chinaman lost in Athens"), was a remarkable propagandist, At 26 he painted the imposing imperial portrait of Bonaparte a sort of Jupiter enthroned, His Trançois I at Leonardo's deathbed," which was done after the restoration of the monarchy, is a striking example of this artist's frosted sentimentality.

Other Landmarks

Some works by less famous artists are also landmarks of sorts. Thus Girodet's "French Heroes" showing Hoche, Marceau, Kleber and other heroes of the revolution being received in the here-after by a host of spirits led hy Ossian. This strange, turbulent painting is perhaps the best ex-pression of the phantasm underlying the revolutionary adventure. which raised such wild hopes and to be the herald of utopia. In this painting phantasm and reality walk hand in hand in an exhilarating rococo composition that is both ridiculous and admirable Gudin was a pupil of Ofro-det's and his "Bravery of Captain Desse" is another original work of vigorous remartic quality showing two ships floundering in a storm of titanic proportions. The treatment is unusual and though it is definitely a narrative painting, its novel conception goes beyond mere narrative.

A portrait of unusual historical interest is that of Robespierre by Labille-Guiard. The brilliant revolutionary is shown at the age of 33, with the sort of magnetic and dangerous charm that ema-nates from the youthful "Citizen Kane." Some of the man's charm is obviously directed at Adelaide Labille-Gulard herself-quite understandable when one has seen her self-portrait. This in itself is an unusual touch usee also a portrait of Count de Vaudreuil by Marie-Louise-Elisabeth

The scale and complexity of

THE MARKET

The Return to Realistic Auction Prices

By Souren Melikian

DARIS, Nov. 22 (IHT).—The ups and downs continue at the Hotel Drouot with price levels 30 per cent lower than they were last spring.

There were two important price tests this week. The first came when the finest and rarest ancient Chinese bronze vase to be seen at a French auction since World War II was sold.

The Shang vase 436.5 centimeters high) is, according to the catalogue, one of about 10 specimens in the world. There are, in fact, fewer comparable pieces similar shape and decoration. Moreover, the seller had set no reserve price. When seen last season by Julian Thompson, Sotheby's director of Chinese art, its value was estimated at £25,000. Shortly after. French expert Guy Portier valued it at 250 000 france some 10 per cent lower, the difference perhaps reflecting grow-ing pessimism on the art market. Shortly before the sale, the estimate given by Portier had dropped to 150,000-200,000 francs. It was knocked down Tuesday at 187,570 francs to an unidentified American buyer. The vase was the buy of the year. There has not been a piece of this caliber on the open market for 20 years.

Manuscripis

It was interesting to observe a mixed trend in a second sale which included fine Western manuscripts. One was a breviary from Cologne-more precisely the Abbey of Sankt Andreas-illuminated in the second quarter of the 14th century with 85 initials and margin decorations. It was part of a work of which the other fragment is in the Fitzwilliam Musenm, Cambridge, England. Only four other manuscripts from this steller are known, according to expert Claude Guerin. The price, 110,600 francs, was considered very good by professionals.

A superb French manuscript of the 15th century, with a rare and important miniature, did not fare so well at 33,570 francs. In terms art history, the miniature landscape with its receding planes and perspective is a landmark,

After that came two Italian manuscripts which had to be bought in. The first one was a Florentine Boccaccio, illuminated about 1470, which made it a rarity in the trade. But the more imrtant of the two was a splendid manuscript copied at Cremona in 1495. It had been commissioned by Deyphebo Azerago, whose name appears in other works, and had a magnificent 18th-century binding executed for the Duc de la Vallière one of the most desirable pedigrees for a bibbophile. The 45 compositions as the expert pointed out, are of outstanding quality. Last year it sold for 99,500 francs. This year the high-est bid was two-thirds of that sum: understandably the work failed to sell.

Contrasting with the uneven results of the manuscripts were the good prices, occasionally even very high prices, fetched by the printed books, mostly on architecture, in the same sale. Among the more speciacular cases was one of the finest books ever printed on architecture, an album of plates engraved in 1804 at the expense of the late 18th, early

Monday's price may therefore be considered to be well over the previous level established at auction-assumiog that a limited comparison can be of significance.

This perhaps largely reflects the ever-growing interest in the sources of surrealism. The plate in the auction catalogue showed a huge human eye reflecting a neo-classical arena with a beam of light sweeping across the arena -a sort of anticipation of Giorgio

$123,000 for Poe Poem

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (AP).-A copy of Edgar Allan Poe's first published poem sold for $123,000 this week—said to be the highest price ever paid for a single American literary work. The copy of "Tamerlane," published in 1827, was bought on hehalf of the Joseph and Helen Regenstein Foundation, which will give it to the Joseph Regenstein Library at the Univer-sity of Chicago. Only one other copy of the Poe poem remains in private hands.

de Citirico's fantastic perspectives. It is typical of Ledoux's visionary plates and appeals to contemporary taste.

Mixed results were also obecryed at the sale of graphics held Wednesday by Guy Loudmer. This was an unpretentious auction with only a handful of good engravings, quite a large number of lithographs and posters, which had been in high demand last year. Some of the best things—those with a famous name-sold very well.

One of Picasso's most beautiful still-lifes of the cubist period, "Compotier" (Fruit Bowl), an etching on copper in Kahnweller's edition of 100 copies, went up to 16.990 francs-this was a high price. But another superb print, a woodblock of 1901 by Felix Valioton signed and stamped with the "dry stamp" of the publisher Sagot, was bought by a collector for only 754 francs, less than half its value

As for minor graphics, so expensive last year, they all took a

On the whole, nothing could be better for buyers than the trend toward more realistic prices -and perhaps nothing could ba healthler for the market than this deflationary trend.

Charge Action Is Return to 'Economic Nationalism'

Dutch Protest U.S. Effort to Cut Flights

By Fred Farris

WASHINGTON NOT. 22 (IRT). The Netherlands government has strongly expressed its con-cern to the United States that an American effort to reduce the number of flights by KLM aircraft to this country marks a return to "economic nationalism." Laurens Brinkhorst, the numer-two foreign-affairs official of the Netherlands, said today there should be "equal and fair opportunity for all airlines in compet-ing on the transallantic run. Mr. Brinkhorst told State De-

The United States wanted KLM to cut its flights to this country by more than 50 per cent. Talks between the State Department and the Dutch government broke down in disagreement last week. Hard to Concur

Mr. Brinkharst told reporters today the Dutch found it hard to concur that "if Pan Am is in difficulties, the burden should be shifted across the Atlantic" to foreign airlines.

The next move in the CAB-KLM matter would be for the U.S. agency to disapprove the Nether-lands' airline schedules, but this would have to be approved by President Ford, who has the last word on all foreign route matters,

Similar talks now are going on between the State Department and the Scandinavian countries over SAS, whose flights the United States wants cut by more than one-third.

30,000 to Be Laid Off At General Motors

By James L. Rowe Jr.

-Economic recession tightened its grip on the American automotive industry yesterday as General Motors announced it would lay off another 30,000 assembly workers next month and Ford said it would lay off about 3,000 white collar workers beginning

Chrysler, which has virtually edded all automobile output for the month of December, would neither confirm nor deny a re-port that it would lay off 15,000 white collar workers for six weeks starting next Wednesday, but a Chrysler spokesman confirmed that there would be substantial layoffs.

New-car sales have plummeted both because of much higher prices and general consumer fears about the health of the economy. New-car sales were down 27 per cent in October and 38 per cent for the first 10 days of November.

In an attempt to stimulate sales, Ford announced yesterday that it would lower the base price of its 1975 two-door subcompact Pinto by $66 and knock another $84 off the retail price by making cheaper, bias-ply tires stan-dard equipment rather than steelbelted radial.

Market Stimulant

John Naughton, Ford's vice-president for sales, said Ford took the action "because the American automobile market obviously needs a stimulant and we want to bring the price of new cars within the reach of more buyers." The $150 trim in the base price of the Pinto means the car will cost $2,769 to become the lowest-priced U.S.-built car.

GM's 30,000 layoffs come on top of the 53,200 workers the com-pany already has on indefinite and temporary layoff. Ford has 10,450 hourly workers on indef-inite layoff and 8,250 temporarily idle. Chriysler has 30,400 indefinitely furloughed, and 35,000 will be off during December.

American Motors, the smallest U.S. automaker, will lay off about 10,000 workers temporarily when it shuts down its only assembly plant during the Thanksgiving

Let Value Line Help You Pinpoint

STOCKS WITH 9% YIELDS PLUS SUPERIOR RECOVERY POTENTIAL

And how some stocks, purchased at today's prices, could yield 15% to 20% just a few years hence

The opportunities for rich dividend yields available in today's stock market may not be seen again in this generation. And they may not last much longer.

When stock prices climb; percentage yields decline. So, for investors who want to take advantage, time may be crucial. Here is how things stand

At their recent prices, 351 stocks of the more than 1500 under continuous review by Value Line were yielding 9% or higher—on the basis of the dividend payments we estimate in the next 12 months; 100 were yielding 12% or higher. (The Value Line Investment Survey 10/18/74.) This is an extraordinary

Important Warning

But it could be a sad mistake to rush into stocks on the basis of high yields alone. You need to know a lot

For instance, some high-yielding stocks have shaky earnings and may be hard pressed to maintain present divideod levels, let alooe increase them. Others, faced with huge capital requirements, may have to retaio a larger portion of earnings.

Moreover, nearly half the 351 stocks yielding 9% and up are now ranked unfavorably by Value Line for Probable Market Performance in the Next 12 Months, relative to all 1500 stocks under regular review. Regardless of their yields, these stocks should, we think, be avoided for the time being.

31 "Combination" Stocks

Ooly 31 of the 351 high-yielding stocks are also (a) raoked favorably for next-12-mooths Probable Market Performance AND (b) ranked average or better for long-term investment Safety. (Value Line 10/18/74.) The Value Line Survey also shows...

- The current yields of these 31 "combination" stocks range from 9% to 12.3%. The average for all of them is 10%.
- . In most cases, their dividends are well "covered" by earnings. On average, they are paying out less than 40% of net iocome in dividends.
- Based on our estimates of their future divideods, these stock 5—if purchased at current prices—will be yielding today's buyer an average of 14% within the next 3 to 5 years; 9 of them, we estimate, will be in the 15% to 20% yield range.
- These stocks also offer worthwhile capital growth possibilities. Our estimates of their future earnings and P/E ratios indicate an average Appreciation Potentiality in the next 3 to 5 years of well over 200%.

For Example . . .

This steel stock, at its recent price of 15, currently yields 10,7% (based on estimated dividends of $1.60 per share in the oext 12 mooths). The dividend payout comes to only 32% of estimated net income. Within 3 to 5 years, we project annual dividends around $3.00 per share—for about a 20% yield against the stock's recent price of 15. Within the sume period, we calculate the stock's Appreciation Potentiality at more than 200%. This stock is also ranked Above Average by Value Line for year-ahead Market Performance and Average for Safety (Value Line 10/18/74).

How The Ranks Work

Every week Value Line ranks more than 1500 stocks-each relative to all the others-for investment Safety and for Probable Market Performance in the Next 12 Months. The ranks range from 1 (Highest) down to 5 (Lowest).

The Safety rank primarily reflects the degree to which a stock typically fluctuates above and below its own long-term price trend. The higher the rank, the greater the price stability.

The rank for Probable Market Performance segregates stocks into five groups as follows:

100 stocks are ranked 1 (Highest)
350 stocks are ranked 2 (Above Average)
600 stocks are ranked 3 (Average)
350 stocks are ranked 4 (Below Average)
100 stocks are ranked 5 (Lowest)

The higher the rank, the stronger the relative price performance we expect to the next 12 months. While not every stock will always perform exactly in accord with its rank, such a large majority bave to the past that we believe no serious investor can totelligently afford to ignore these ranks.

Whatever else you are looking for in stocks, we recommend that you coocentrate on stocks. which are also ranked 1 (Highest) or 2 (Above Average) by Value Line for Probable Market Performance in the Next 12 Months.

Updated Every Week

Every week-for EACH of more than 1500 stocks-the Value Line Survey updates. . .

- a) Rank for Probable Market Performance in the
- Next 12 Mooths; b) Rank for iovestmeot Safety;
- c) Estimated Yield in the oext 12 months; d) Estimated Appreciation Potentiality in the
- next 3 to 5 years; e) Latest Price, earnings, P/E and dividend data.
- lo addition, each of the more than 1500 stocks is the subject of a comprehensive new full-page report at least ooce every three months-including 23 series of vital financial and operating statistics going back 10 years and estimated 3 to 5 years into the future.

All told, Value Line gives you more meaningful data and evaluations on each of 1500 stocks than any other investment source we know of. And it's organized for quick and easy reference. (With the latest weekly Value Line Survey, for iostance, it would take you just minutes to check which stocks currently yield 8% or 9% or 10% or more.)

How To Participate

Today's market, in our judgment, offers greater potentials—not only for high yields but also for other investment rewards—than at any time since 1949. Recently, the Value Line Average of more than 1500 stocks was more than 40% below its 1961 starting point (the Value Line Survey 10/18/74).

Rain JAMES WELCH is a 24-year-old American Indian (Blackfeet and Grosventre). Last year he published a collection of poems, "Riding the Earthboy 40," and now this first novel the third volume in Harper & Row's Native American Publishing Program. Not that Welch doesn't draw a substantial part of his emotional power and the ecuces of his story from an intensely observed past, from a meticulous particularity of human and geographic reference—reservation Montana. His book is nothing if not firmly local, rural cimplicitly acti-urban, in the main traditioo of the Europeao and American novel. Its locus and cast are in fact tightly constricted—an aging young man, his mother, stepfather, his dying grandmother, ao important blind oeighbor; the family ranch; nearby towns with bars and lonely women. But the story it tells, the knowledge it contains, has as much to say of the bone-deep disaffection and bafflement, the famous and apparently incurable psychic paralysis of several million Americans of varied origins now in their twenties, early thirties, as of any smaller group.

The components of the story are these—the narrator, a nameless 32-year-old Indian, lives on a 360-acre ranch on a reservation in north-central Mootana. The spread beloogs to his widowed mother; she and her ancient mother are iso far as he knows) his surviving family His dreamy, cheerful father and an older brother, remembered as a paragon of competence, have died years before—the father frozen while drunk, the brother run down by a truck in an accident for which the narrator still feels responsibility. In the same ca-tastrophe, the narrator suffered a knee injury which was later the cause of his only extended stav off-reservatioo-an operatloo io Tacoma and the chance of a joh there in rehabilitation. terminated by his revulsion from a nurse's anti-Indian remarks.

His mother remarries early in the novel; her husband proudly assumes management of the land. The narrator continues his cycle of ranch work, 50-mile trips to town for the glum sprees of drink and women which serve as both narcotic and harsh electrotherapy, returning- him to the tangled and paralyzing peace of family-pride in his tough and capable mother but disdain for her cool independence from him; amused animal affection for his senile grandmother (a genuine survivor of the great Blackfeet past and, not incidentally, a victim of her own tribe's internal crueities); perhaps most damaging, an obsessive and by now sentimental regret for his father and brother.

In short, a black sack tied firmly shut. But no more firmly tied than most human sacks—as Welch and his narrator both see cslmly land detail in richly humorous low-life encounters with mysteriously luckless whites) —and tied shut partly by the man's past refusal to do more than double his own binding knots. Not much of a story if it eoded there, surely not a fresh

But just as it threatens to die in its crowded sack, it opens onto light-and through natural. carefully prepared, but beaotifully surprising narrative means: a recovery of the past; a vener-able, maybe lovable, maybe nsable past. To describe that opening here would deprive readers of the pleasure of its sudden radiance within the whole book Enough to say that it involves the narrator's late discovery of loog-suppressed facts about his own heritage—the names and history of his graodparents—and that Welch's new version of the central scene in all narrative literature the finding of lost kio) can staod proudly with its most moving predecessors in epic.

The future use for the parrator of even so joyful a recognition is not pressed or prognosticated. Near the end he speaks of "planning my new life"; but oeither he nor Welch expands on what the practicalities of such a life might be: and, since it seems to include a renewed pursuit of his wretched Cree mistress, the omens are sad. The moment of clear knowledge may only have been that-a moment in a long night, a quick flush of heat. But even a quick light can cut a deep image; and what Welch has shown, not only for his lonely Blackfeet hero but for armies of the rapidly aging young, is a truth engraved in iron—a society which has taken oo care that its children love their past (and a past which has taken no care to be lovable or venerable-a ground at least) will reap generations of frozen children, bateful and hated. the opening round of the World Frotball League playoffs.

The Hawaiians, who were only 9-11 during the regular season, qualified to play at Birmingham—which received a bys—Wednesdaw right in the World Person day night in the World Bow?

Johnson, a National Pootball League veteran who was released by the New York Giants to Sepiber, passed five yards to John Keisey for a second-quarter touchdown and eight yards to John Isenbarger for a score in the final period.

Three-Yard Run

Davis tallied the Hawaiians' first touchdown on a three-yard run in the opening period and third period. Davis's second touchdown and a subsequent action point put the Hawaiians in front, 25-14, after the Sun fought back from a 17-0 deficit to 17-14.

The Sun had to play without running back Kermit Johnson and offensive tackle Booker Brown, the team's second and third draft choices. The pair falled to show up for the game and a Sun spokesman said they had been suspended.

After Isenbarger caught Johnson's touchdown pass, a fight broke out between him and a Sun defensive back, Jim Bowman. The fight led to a brief free-forall among Hawatian and Sun players, after which Bowman was ejected from the game.

JOHANNESBURG, Nov. 22 (Reuters).—Raul Ramirez of Mexico scored the biggest upset of the South African Open tennis championships so far when he beat second-seeded Ken Roszwall of Australia here today in the quarterfinals of the men's singles.

Star Rookie In Basketball Is Suspended ABA Club Acts After Barnes Disappears

From Wire Dispatches ST. LOUIS, Nov. 22.-Rookie center Marvin Barnes, who falled to show up for the Spirits of St. Louis game Wednesday night and old not return with the team to St. Louis yesterday, was suspended without pay at the start of the Spirits game last night against Memphis.

The whereabouts of Barnes, who reportedly is playing for the ABA club under a $2.1-million contract, were unknown, a team spokerman said last night. Later his mother told newsmen that she had received a telephone call in Providence, R.I., from her son, who told her that he probably would report back to the team.

"He didn't say where he was, but he sounded fine," Mrs. Luin Barnes said. "He said he was going to meet with Don Shupak about going back."

Shupak is one of four New York businessmen who own the Barnes, a 6-9 two-tima All-America from Providence Co!lege, was reported to be noset shout numerous fines he had received and to be in financial difficulty. He recently has been advised by a new agent, Marshall Boyer, who also represents teammate Joe Caldwell.

Boyer reportedly told Barnes that his contract, which was negotiated for him by a Boston attorney, Bob Woolf, was not hinding and not as lucrative as the player believed.

"That's all a bunch of garbage," Woolf said in Boston, where ha went over the contract with Mrs. Barnes and Jimmy Adams, Barnes's coach in high school, Marvin is in good financial shape. Russia Bars Visa For Sakharov Kin MOSCOW, Nov. 22 (AP) .- Dissident physicist Andrei Sakharov said yesterday that the Soviet government has refused to grant visas to his stepdaughter and her husband so that they may visit the United States. He said that the applications were made 20 months ago.

Tatyana Semyonova and her husband, Yefrem Yankelevich, had been invited to study at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. She appealed the refusal, delivered to her three days ago, in B letter to President Nikolal Podgorny. The letter was releas-

LONDON (IHT).—A professor of creative writing at the University of Arkansas has proposed, first in the pages of Esquire and now in a film called "Rollerball," a vision of life in the year 2018: The financial problems of most nations have vanished-how the professor doesn't explain, and who can blame him-and so have ill-housing, war and nationalism.

Life is run by skilled management executives and everything is hunky dory and boring as bell. So a murderous sport, Rollerball, is invented and it makes the gladiators' arena look like Parcheesi. The world's hest player is called Jonathen E. and he is played in the film, now being completed at Pinewood studios outside London, by James Caan.

Director Norman Jewison says "Roller-ball" concerns increasing brutality in sports and "the lowering threshold of individual shock and outrage at the depersonalization of human life" John Houseman, who plays the Corporate Boss, says "Rollerhall" is really a Greek tragedy with Casn as Prometheus and himself as Zeus. Caan thinks Rollerball is here right now.

"I suppose so, with all this stress on winning," he says. "Winning's hecome so important. It is with me, too," he adds. Right now, Caan is B champ. An Academy Award nominee for playing Sonny Corleone in "The Godfather," and an Emmy nominee for "Brian's Song" on television, he has gone on to make "Cin-derella Liberty," Kerel Reins "The Gambler," in which he was called hypnotically absorbing, a Sutherland-Gould style comedy with Alan Arkin called "Freebie and the Bean" and the sequel to "Funny Girl," "Funny Ledy," in which he stars, as showman Billy Rose, with Barbra Streisand and gets to sing 'Does the Spearmint Lose Its Flavor on the Bedpost Overnight?" accompanying himself on tha

Dining Room

"All these pictures coming out!" Caan "Watch Jimmy sing! Wetch Jimmy skate!" Wetch Jimmy.

In the studio's sedate dining room Caan is a cut-up, sucking in his cheeks like a Vogue model at the news that Norman Parkinson is there, accusing the waitress of wishing to destroy his beautiful body with fried enions of which he has two helpings, chattering without stop. The funny stuff isn't just silly.

"I clown around." he says in a quiet moment. "That way I'm open, I'm available to what's going on." His reactions are physical. "I get the physicalness of the character, words are secondary to me. I hate to rehearse. You rehearse and you get something you like, then you try to match it. When I'm aware of myself, I'm. in trouble: I know I'm acking."
His ability to absorb the physical being of a character is astonishing. For "Roller-ball" he learned at once to state like a professional. "I always wanted to be a professional athlete, I'm a real Walter Mitty," he says. A few years back, watching some cowboys rope steers he started to copy them and is now a member of the professional rodeo cowboys' association, mendaciously introduced at rodeos as a native of Columbia Falls, Mont.

His roping horse is called Andy, Andrew if Casn is feeling grand, and they have won as much as $189 in one rodeo and $36 in another. Caan says he's the world's only New York Jewish cowboy.

Moving Family

He is moving his entire family from Sunnyside, Queens, out to California. His father was a butcher. "Now he's become the greatest film critic in the world," Caan says. "My mother laughs from morning to night." His crazy kid brother Ronnie hangs around the set as a sort of clown

Having studied law, economics, management and other useful subjects, each for about two weeks, Caan studied acting with Sanford Meisner, got four tobs out of his first four auditions, was summoned to Hol-lywood, but decided not to stay. "It was the year of the angry young New York actor," he says.

He worked off-Broadway, hustling pool halls between shows to earn enough to live in a decent building, and then made his film debut as a mean killer in "Lady in a Cage" with Olivia de Havilland. Of his early films, the only one likely to survive is "The Rain People," in which he played, very touchingly, a brain-damaged football hero and which Prancis Ford Coppola, later of "The Godfather," directed.

" The Rain People' didn't make money

James Caan

If s picture makes money, you're s good actor." Caan says. "I happened to do The Godfather and Brian's Song in tha same year. All of a sudden you're s

"I had principles when I started and they haven't changed. My goal in this business is to be respected by people I respect. I like money, I'd like to gat B better roping horse—but when Albert Fincalls to say he liked me in "The Gambler, that's something. I still believe in the art of acting."

His Physique

He hasn't allowed his strapping physique to limit him to athletic roles. "In The Gambler I play a professor of English literature. If I can perpetrate that hoaz ou the world I can do anything." He had great fun playing the half-pint wheeler-dealer Billy Rose in "Funny Ladv."

"My agents," he says, "want me to play Sonny Corleone all the rest of my life. People who do the same thing again and again—I can understand it, but it's not acting. If you have a saxophone and the only thing you can play on it is Tankee Doddle Dandy, no matter how well you do it, you're playing Yankee Doodle not the samphone."

Now he's hit the big-time, Jimmy Caan revels in it. "Signing sutographs is part of my job. These guys who've had one frigging hit and they're hiding-you fight for recognition and then you hide?"

Caan likes to win. Perhaps he likes it all the more hecause he knows that sooner or later he'll lose. "I've gotten praise," he says. "Now I'll get the rest. "I wonder how I'll react when it comes I think," he says, "I'll be hurt." In the meantime, watch Jimmy.

PEOPLE:

Former Vice-President Spire Agnew is reportedly making $100,000 B year from one business venture and might have another six-figure income from commissions, but he is still unhappy over Watergate. "I'm bitter he is quoted as saying in the December issue of McCall's magazine. "Til never get over the distortions and inaccuracies in the press. I don't like 90 per cent of the press. I don't need the press." Following his conviction on B tax-evasion charge and resignation as Vice-President, Agnew began a career as a business broker. Now he could be well on his way to becoming a millionaire," says Nick Thimmesch, Buthor of the article. Thimmesch says that Agnew used an unspectfied ad-vance on his still uncompleted novel to finance Pathlite Inc. a land-owning, managing and consulting firm. He also is said to have a four-year contract with Midwest land developer Walter Dilbeck that pays $100,000 a year plus a third of profits. Furthermore, Agnew is said to be negotiating a potential $5 or
